A Petition for His Removal Receives Very Little Attention.

He is Charged With Breaking Into Houses Without a Warrant,

This is its first introduction to the light of day, and as far as the petitioners can learn it might as well have been consigned to the flames as to the commissioners. The paper is dated at Washington, April 4, and is addressed to the commissioners. It says:

GENTLEMEN: We, the undersigned property owners, taxbayers, and residents living on the illadensburg road and its vicinity, respectfully request that Folice Officer J. B. Shock be taken away from this beat, for the following reasons: He is constantly interfering in matters which are not violations of law, making mischief, and trespassing on our places and property; his neglect of duty in driving the wagon of the bays' reform school, loaded with furniture or other things; his striving the bungles, containing the governor and his family, while on duty and in uniform, leaving his beat for hours at a time on such occasions, this happening frequently; his putting on boxing gloves and ooxing in uniform at a bincksmith shop on his best—all of these things happening during the time he should have been on duty. Added to this are his disagreeable, overbearing manners. He has been on this best about three years. We carnestly hope that our petition will meet with your favorable consideration and approval. We have the honor to remain your most obedient servants.

That gentleman, desiring somegapport to the petition, a bunch of athleavits were furnished him, which he transmitted with the petition to the commissioners, inviting their consideration of the same. The statements in the depositions are too lengthy to publish in full, and only a synopsis of them will be here given.

and only a synopsis of them will be here given.

Eliza Galos, 65 years of ago, residing in Prince Georges county, Maryland, with her husband and grandson, swears that on one occasion while she was at home alone, excepting that her grandson was with her, Officer Slack came to her house with pistol in hand, rushed in, swearing and cursing, and aid "You dam black —, come out here and I'll blow your brains out." He then proceeded to search the house, swearing that if he found "the black — he would kill proceeded to search the house, swearing that if he found "the black — he would kill him." She was an invalid at the time and has never recovered from the sheek and effects of the fright. He pulled the bed down, broke open her husbaud's chest, ransacked the house, did not show any warrant or pretend to have any. Charles Gales, aged 14 and Daniel Gales, aged 90 years, corrobotate the statement made by Mrs. Gales in all its material portions.

Matilda Lowe, 19 years of age, deposes that while her people were residing near the Matilda Lowe, 19 years of age, deposes that while her people were residing near the reform school Officer Slack came to the house on one occasion while she was at home with her two little brothers holding a pistol in his hand, which she thinks was cocked. She was standing in the door at the time. He, in a threatening manner, told her to stand back, forced himself into the house, and began searching the rooms under the pretense that he was looking for somebody. He found the room of her grandmother locked, and tried to break it open. He did not protend to have any warrant, and she was very much alarmed at his conduct.

He did not pro-tend to have a warrant, and did not find any stolen property. As she and her husband had resided there for twenty years and were never charged nor suspected of doing wrong, she feels that the conduct of Slack in her house was an outrage, and disgraced them in the

was an outrage, and disgraced them in the eyes of their neighbors.

Hearietta Devars states that Slack came to ber house, on Thirteenth street northeast, and, without knocking, broke open the room, rushed into the house, knocked her little child down and stepped on it. He rushed up to her 15-year-old son and dragged him out of the house. When she asked him what was the matter Slack refused to tell her, but said he had the right to burn a house down, if necessary, to make an arrost. She did not know what the boy was arrested for, but from the brutal manner in which he was treated she feared it was murder. At the police court she learned he was charged with gathering wild cherries, and thereby trespassing on a neighboring farm.

The Chicago. Tilden and Hendricks were indoresed for the presidency. The Jefferson Democratic club has also indorsed Tilden for the presidency.

Mr. Edwards, the blacksmith, in his affidavit, says that since he signed the potition Slack has frequently analyed him at the shop, and endeavored to make him say hedid not sign the paper, and tried to persuade him to lie about it. Philip Glegau residing near Mount Olivet cemetry, says that he has frequently seen Slack while on duty and in uniform playing cards on week days and on Sunday. He has seen him leave his beat for hours at a time and drive the carriage or buggy of the Re-form school. He also saw him while in uniform engage in a fight with R. F. Day about a dog. Robert F. Day confirms the latter state

Robert F. Day confirms the latter statement, and further declares that he has seen Slack spend hours at the Reform school boxing, wrestling, and playing cards.

After these papers reached the commissioners, which were supposed in themselves to be sufficient to cite Slack before the trial board, they were referred to the chief of police and handed down until they reached a lieutonant, who was instructed to make an investigation. It is charged that he took a novel way of doing it. Slack was consulted, and it is said he was advised to go right to work and got up a counter potition. He acted upon and it is said he was advised to go right to work and got up a counter potition. He acted upon the advice, and has been so successful as to secure four signatures to a paper. When he is ready probably the investigation will begin. Up to the present time, however, Mr. Browne, the attorney, has been unable to get any satisfactory answer, but to make the matter more binding has put in two more affidavits, the most important of which is made by Theodore S. Samuels, dairyman, residing near Mount Olivet.

He says: "I am frequently annoyed by Pelice Officer J. B. Slack coming to my house and trespassing on my place, hitching his horse, and intruding himself into my house and family, while on duty, and paying and family, while on duty, and paying attention to my young lady uleces, urging them to go buggy riding with him and offering to get them positions in the government printing office. He is a married man and has a family. His attentions to my family are disagreeable and obposious to me, and if I am to be subjected to them I would rather sell out and move away, which would be a great damage to my business."

These are some of the adidavits submitted to the commissioners, but which it seems are not deemed of sufficient importance to bring the officer up on charges before the trial board, where his accusers can face him.

CLARK MILLS'S WILL,

A Jury Decides that the Sculptor's Testament is Valid.

The suit of Theodore A. Mills, Theophilus F. Mills, James S. Mills, and Clark Mills, jr., ons of the late Clark Mills, against Jesso B. Wilson, executor; Susan E. Mills, widow, and Eva S, Mills Howell was tried in the circuit court yesterday afternoon. The cause of action is in the nature of issues from the probate court. The plaintiffs attack the will of the late Clark Mills, and the questions to be submitted to the jury are whether or not the deceased was of sound mind at the time of the execution of the will and codesis, or whether under whether undue influence was used by Mrs. Mills and Miss Eva Mills Howell to have the testator leave his property as he did. The issues as to undue influence were withdrawn. and the jury found that the will and codocil were together the last will and testament of Clark Mills, which is a vordlet in favor of the Clark Mills, over whose will and codicils this contest was made, was the well-known sculptor who achieved a national reputation. His equestrian statues of Washington and Jackson, occupying two of the most promi-nent parks in this city, and that of the God-dess of Liberty, surmounting the dome of the capital are mountains. dess of Liberty, surmenting the dome of the capitol, are monuments to his memory that will indure for all time. He owned several acres of land, some four miles out of the city, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, on a portion of which was located the foundry where the statues were cast in brenze, and his experimental effort of the rearing horse, well balanced, still stands on the pedestal on the lawn in front of the country residence. Mr. Mills also owned a fine residence on I street, and was thought to be a man of considerable means at the time of his death. The contest over the will grow out of the disposition the testator made of his property, some of the codicils being prepared and executed during the closing hours of his life. It was subsequently asserted that an unfair division had been made of the property, and that influence was brought to bear upon the deceased to bequeathe the estate as he did. The sons filed a caveat to the will. The verdict yesterday sustained the will and first codicil, and exonerates the three defendants from any impropriety whatever on their part in connection with the three defendants from any impropriety what-ever on their part in connection with the making of the will or codicils.

THE MILD-EYED COW.

She Destroys a Book Store and is Captured by Texas Methods.

A large buffalo cow created considerable excitement on the avenue yesterday by dashing along the sidewalks and assisting pedestrians in their flight. She was captured at the corner of Four-and-a-half street, but broke away and dashed into Shillington's book store, which was filled with people. Everybody rushed out of the rear door pur-sued by the enraged cow, and a little man with a bald head and a seersucker suit, cov-ered his first mile in 1:59. After playfully demolishing some tree boxes and making savage attempts to gore some one, the cow-came to a standstill under a brick wall on Four-and-a-half street, and began chewing a

Some men mounted the wall and looked down at her, while a gentleman, who had lived in Texas, proposed that they lasso her. A rope was secured, and the crowd stood with bated breath as the Texan made a slip-knot and whirled it in the air several times. He then bent down and threw it with a great display on a railing across the way, while the then bent down and threw it with a great display on a railing across the way, while the cow whisked her tail and the spectators cheered. A colored man, who had seen how it was done at a circus, then took the rope, and making a nose in the end, about five feet in diameter, dropped it over the cow's head. The cow pulled and the rope was se-curely fastened to her head. The crowd held on to the rope, but the cow was strong, and soon rope, cow, and people were squirming in the alley. After an hour spont in extracting the various sections the cow was lead back to
